Wave Rock is a natural rock formation near Hyden, Australia. Formed by the fluvial erosion of softer rock, it gets its color from the washing down of chemical deposits of carbonate and iron hydroxide.

This page:
Kata Tjuta, meaning “many heads,” is a group of 36 domes of sedimentary rock consisting of varying rock types including granite and basalt, cemented together with sandstone. It was once thought to have been a single huge rock. This area, the Uluru (Ayers Rock) – Kata Tjuta National Park, was handed back to the Aborigines in 1987.

The Three Sisters are a famous rock formation in the Blue Mountains of New South Wales. Legend says that three sisters fell in love with three men from the Katoomba tribe, but tribal law forbade them to marry. A major tribal battle ensued, and a witchdoctor turned the sisters into stone to protect them from harm. Unfortunately, the witchdoctor was killed in the fighting. No one else could reverse the spell, so the sisters remain in stone.
